LSAN

- elevates upper lip and wing of nose
- two strips: lateral and medial
- contracting elevates wings of the nose and the middle portion of upper lip

Levator Labii Superioris (LSAN)

Orbicularis Oris

- mediolus appears as a small fleshy mound at each end of the lips. Shadows and tones may catch along bottom border. Looks like a little tuck of skin.
- fibrous tissue around perimeter of lips catches highlights

Depressor labii inferioris:

- draws lower lip downward slightly exposing lower teeth during contraction

Buccinator:

- muscular wall of cheeks
- Origin near first and second molars of maxilla and the mandible and pterygo-mandible raphe

Depressor anguli oris:

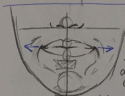

- presses down angle of mouth (modiolus)
- insertion is below insertion of zygomatic major
- antagonist to zygomatic major
- grimace/sadness/disapproval

Mentalis:

- fleshes out bony part of chin, giving oval shape
- contracts: pulls skin of chin upward, pushes lower lip upward and outward

Many small dimples during contraction

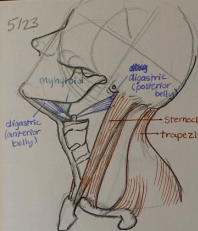

- pulls straight back, compressing cheeks and lips
- dimples created around outer corner of mouth

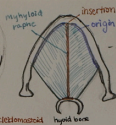

- used in wind/brass instruments
- contempt, annoyance, smirking
- fibers between upper and lower lips are crisscrossed
- partially covered by masseter

Xymox - Phoenix of my heart

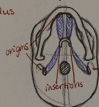

5/23

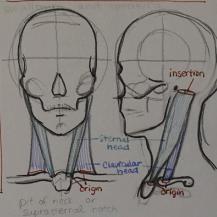

- digastric on top
- lower/depress mandible
- elevate hyoid bone during swallowing and speaking

Mylohyoid ✓
- forms floor of mouth, bottom plane of jaw

Digastric
- anterior (front) longer and thicker
- attaches to medial side of mastoid process
- inserts into hyoid bone by fibrous loop

Sternocleidomastoid

- space between straps is lesser supra-clavicular fossa
- germinal tendons visible when head is turned or tilted
- merge midway up

pit of neck or suprasternal notch

- observe stretching or compression to convey tension or action
